

Community Resources for Families

Please join the Glen Ridge Student Services department for a virtual workshop on April 1, 7 – 8 pm

Community Resources for Families

The ability to participate in local cultural, athletic, and recreational activities allows families to feel as if they are part of the community. These types of activities can lead to an improved quality of life and a sense of acceptance from the community for individuals with neuro-diverse needs and their families. Having neurodiverse individuals participate in community events in turn enriches the environment by infusing diversity and acceptance. However, these environments can present a challenge from a sensory or logistical perspective leading to a lack of participation and enjoyment. This workshop will share athletic, recreational, cultural, and artistic institutions near the Glen Ridge community that offer special events and programs for neurodiverse individuals and their families. Come learn about organizations in our area that offer special programs as we build a resource guide for community involvement.
